Please write a clear, concise, and well-organized essay explaining your motivation for applying to IGP.

In your essay, please address the following points:

1. Your educational background and how your previous studies, activities, personal interests, or experiences have prepared you for IGP. Please include concrete examples.
2. Your motivation for applying to IGP and studying in Japan.
3. What you want to learn in IGP before choosing your specialization field, and how you hope to use the first 3 semesters to broaden your knowledge, develop academic skills, and identify your future specialization field.
4. What kind of research or engineering problems you may wish to pursue after beginning research later in the program.
5. How IGP may contribute to your future career goals, including whether you are interested in working in Japan after graduation. This information will be used to better understand your goals and expectations.

Applicants do not need to identify a specific specialization field, laboratory, or supervisor at the time of application. The essay should reflect the applicant's own thoughts, goals, and experiences.
